Press Release – Interrupter for Price of Diesel Invoked – Nova Scotia Utility and Review Board

Tuesday, January 14, 2025 – Effective at midnight tonight, the price of diesel oil will be adjusted. This change is necessary due to significant shifts in the market price of diesel oil. The pump price will be changed at midnight tonight.

The price of gasoline is NOT affected by this interruption.

The benchmark price of diesel oil is based on an average of the daily market price for refined product on the New York Mercantile Exchange (NYMEX), converted into Canadian dollars. The retail price paid at the pump is the benchmark price with wholesale margin, retailer markup, transportation allowance, winter blending, cost of carbon and clean fuel regulations, an adjustment for retail margin, and taxes added.

The Nova Scotia Utility and Review Board monitors the markets for gasoline and diesel oil daily and, should conditions warrant, may set a new price at any time.
